

Central America Inbound Trade Mission to Florida & Summer Fancy Food

Miami, Florida & New York, New York
June 22-24, 2023

Central America and the Caribbean, with their close geographical and economic ties to the United States, have always been an important market for U.S. agricultural exports. U.S. market share in this region averages more than 40 percent, the highest outside of Canada and Mexico. The CAFTA-DR agreement was implemented on a rolling basis between the United States and six Central American and Caribbean trading partners: El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua in 2006; the Dominican Republic in 2007; and Costa Rica in 2009. At a combined $4.4 billion, the CAFTA-DR countries rank as the seventh-largest agricultural market for U.S. exports. These markets offer great opportunity for Southern U.S. exporters.

Registering for this event will allow companies to meet one-on-one with qualified buyers from Central America in either Florida or those participating or visiting the Summer Fancy Food Show in New York the opportunity to explore these markets at a very low cost.
