

Food Hotel China

Shanghai, China
November 12-14, 2024

China is the 2nd-largest consumer market and importer in the world. China imported over $236 billion worth of agriculture imports from around the world in 2022, up 7.4 percent from 2021. Within its trade partners, the U.S. has continued to establish its importance to the Chinese market and its demand by supplying a growing number of agricultural products, peaking at $41 billion in 2022, another record year and topping the $35 billion recorded in 2021. While bulk products made up 70 percent of China's total agricultural imports from the United States, consumer products have continued to grow strength to strength, more than tripling its imports from $2 billion in 2019 to $7.2 billion in 2022, with southern United States playing an important role as a key supplier to the market.
